

BUILD YOUR NEXT CHAPTER

Advanced Reinvention Workbook

A deeper self-paced system for turning a major life goal into a focused 90-day execution plan - with decision tools, weekly reviews, AI prompts, and reset protocols.

Use this workbook actively. Write in it, challenge your first answers, and return to the weekly pages instead of restarting from zero.

Educational coaching material only. This workbook is not therapy, medical care, legal advice, financial advice, or a guarantee of results.

01 | THE REAL INVENTORY

Where are you actually starting?

Reinvention works better when the starting point is specific. Take inventory without turning the inventory into a judgment about yourself.

What is working well enough to protect?

What repeatedly drains time, attention, money, or energy?

What have you been tolerating that no longer fits?

If nothing changed for 12 months, what would bother you most?

Reality vs. story

Separate observable facts from interpretations. This reduces the chance of building a plan around assumptions.

FACTS I can verify:

STORIES or assumptions I may be adding:

What changes when I respond to the facts instead of the story?

02 | CHOOSE THE NEXT CHAPTER

One primary direction

You can care about many things while choosing one primary 90-day direction. Focus is not forever; it is a temporary decision about where your best effort goes.

My 90-day focus is:

Why this matters now:

What I am deliberately NOT prioritizing for these 90 days:

At day 90, what observable evidence would show progress?

The anti-vague test

Rewrite the goal until another person could tell whether you acted on it.

Vague version:

Specific version:

What will I do, make, finish, practice, publish, apply for, or measure?

03 | DESIGN THE 90-DAY ROADMAP

Three phases

Break the quarter into three 30-day phases: foundation, execution, and proof.

Days 1-30 - Foundation: What must exist first?

Days 31-60 - Execution: What must be repeated?

Days 61-90 - Proof: What will be finished, tested, published, submitted, or reviewed?

Milestone filter

A milestone should represent progress, not busywork.

Milestone 1 + due date:

Milestone 2 + due date:

Milestone 3 + due date:

Which milestone creates the most useful evidence?

04 | BUILD A WEEK THAT CAN SURVIVE REAL LIFE

Minimum viable week

Design the smallest week that still counts. This is the version you can complete even when motivation is low.

My three non-negotiable actions each week:

The smallest acceptable version of each action:

When will each action happen?

What can be skipped without collapsing the plan?

Friction audit

Make the right action easier before relying on willpower.

What usually stops me?

What can I prepare in advance?

What distraction needs a boundary?

What reminder, environment change, or checklist would reduce friction?

05 | THE AI EXECUTION LAB

Use AI as a thinking partner

AI can help organize, question, rehearse, brainstorm, and convert messy thoughts into next actions. Keep your judgment and verify important information.

Prompt: Here is my 90-day goal, my constraints, and what I have already tried. Ask me five questions that would make my plan more realistic.

Prompt: Turn this brain-dump into tasks that each take 30 minutes or less. Mark the three highest-leverage actions.

Prompt: Challenge this plan. What assumptions am I making, what could fail, and what is a simpler version?

Prompt: I missed a week. Help me restart without rebuilding the entire plan.

Build your personal AI brief

Give an AI assistant enough context to help without handing over your decisions.

My goal:

My real constraints:

My strengths/resources:

Things I will not compromise:

How I want the assistant to challenge me:

06 | DECISION SYSTEM

When everything feels important

Use a simple filter: impact, urgency, reversibility, and effort.

Decision I need to make:

What happens if I do nothing for 30 days?

Is this reversible?

What is the smallest test I can run before making a larger commitment?

Opportunity filter

Not every opportunity belongs in this chapter.

Does this move the 90-day goal forward?

What does it cost in time/money/attention?

What would I have to stop doing to say yes?

YES / NO / NOT NOW - and why?

07 | BOUNDARIES & ENVIRONMENT

Protect the plan

A plan competes with habits, requests, distractions, and environments. Decide your boundaries before you need them.

What am I saying no to for 90 days?

Who needs to know my availability or boundaries?

What environment helps me work?

What is my script for protecting a planned work block?

Support map

Identify practical support instead of waiting for perfect encouragement.

People who can encourage me:

People who can give practical help:

Communities/resources I can use:

Where I need to rely on a system rather than another person:

08 | PROOF, NOT PERFECTION

Evidence tracker

Confidence becomes more useful when it is attached to evidence.

This week I finished:

I handled something differently by:

I learned:

The next proof I want to collect is:

Score the system, not yourself

Review whether the system worked instead of turning a bad week into an identity judgment.

What part of the system worked?

What broke?

Was the task unclear, too large, badly timed, or genuinely unnecessary?

One adjustment for next week:

09 | THE RESET PROTOCOL

A bad week is data

Do not rebuild the whole plan because you missed several days. Use a reset sequence.

1. What happened - in facts?

2. What still matters?

3. What can be dropped?

4. What is the next 15-minute action?

5. When exactly will I do it?

72-hour restart

Choose one action for each of the next three days. Keep them small enough to finish.

Day 1 action:

Day 2 action:

Day 3 action:

What will I refuse to add until these are complete?

10 | WEEKLY CEO REVIEW

Run your own review

Once a week, look at the plan from above instead of reacting to it minute by minute.

Biggest win:

What moved the goal forward?

What looked productive but was not?

What am I avoiding?

Top three actions next week:

One thing to remove or simplify:

Numbers that matter

Choose a few measures tied to your actual goal. Avoid tracking numbers just because they are easy to count.

Metric 1:

Metric 2:

Metric 3:

What decision will these numbers help me make?

11 | DAYS 30 / 60 / 90 REVIEWS

Day 30

Review direction before increasing effort.

What changed?

What did I learn?

What should I stop/start/continue?

Is the 90-day goal still the right goal?

Day 60

Look for patterns.

What is consistently working?

Where am I still creating friction?

What needs a stronger boundary?

What proof can I create before day 90?

Day 90

Close the loop before choosing the next chapter.

What did I finish?

What evidence did I create?

What did I learn about how I work?

What carries forward?

What is the next chapter?

12 | YOUR ONE-PAGE OPERATING PLAN

Put the whole system on one page

This is the page to revisit when you feel scattered.

My 90-day goal:

My three milestones:

My weekly non-negotiables:

My primary metric(s):

My biggest predictable obstacle:

My reset action:

My next action today:

WEEKLY REVIEW TEMPLATE 1

Use this page at the end of a week. Duplicate the questions in a notebook after you use all four templates.

The three most important things I completed:

What created momentum?

What created friction?

What am I avoiding?

What needs to be simplified?

My three priorities next week:

The first action I will take:

WEEKLY REVIEW TEMPLATE 2

Use this page at the end of a week. Duplicate the questions in a notebook after you use all four templates.

The three most important things I completed:

What created momentum?

What created friction?

What am I avoiding?

What needs to be simplified?

My three priorities next week:

The first action I will take:

WEEKLY REVIEW TEMPLATE 3

Use this page at the end of a week. Duplicate the questions in a notebook after you use all four templates.

The three most important things I completed:

What created momentum?

What created friction?

What am I avoiding?

What needs to be simplified?

My three priorities next week:

The first action I will take:

WEEKLY REVIEW TEMPLATE 4

Use this page at the end of a week. Duplicate the questions in a notebook after you use all four templates.

The three most important things I completed:

What created momentum?

What created friction?

What am I avoiding?

What needs to be simplified?

My three priorities next week:

The first action I will take:

FINAL COMMITMENT

The point of this workbook is not to create a beautiful plan. It is to create a plan you can keep using when the week is imperfect.

For the next 90 days, I am building:

The action I will complete in the next 24 hours:

Date:

Signature / commitment to myself: